BLACKBERRING.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
My hands and mouth had full employ.
When blackberries were ripe,
And I was not yet a wren, thy boy.

Thy thorns from out my arms and knees,
And my good dad, to give me ease,
Drew me up to a tree, and I was safe,
When blackberries grew sweet.

You, tramping through the briars,
With the thorns in your pants and aches,
For two or three fair colleens' sakes—

Whose names I'll not repeat—

Thy boy, thy boy, thy boy, thy boy,
Who'd been my partner here and there,
A roundabout everywhere.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy.

When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
When I was but a wren, thy boy,
